BUILDING BRIDGES: UPDATE FROM THE MOMS PROJECT TEAM

Hello from the MoMs Project Team! We're thrilled to share our latest updates. The MoMs project has been making steady progress in fostering awareness and breaking barriers for women with disabilities. Our focus groups have provided valuable insights into the challenges faced by WwDs in gynaecological-obstetric services.

The videos accompanying the Research Book are now available in national sign languages and International Sign! These videos summarise each chapter. The Research Book delves into the legal and cultural frameworks surrounding motherhood for women with disabilities, providing vital information and resources for WwDs, healthcare professionals, and educators. Visit our website to watch the videos!

THE PARTNERSHIP:

LTTA in Sevilla

In October, the MoMs project hosted a three-day training in Sevilla, bringing together professionals, educators, and women with disabilities to dive into the challenges of motherhood and disability. The sessions were full of honest conversations, personal stories, and practical tools to break down stereotypes and barriers. It was an inspiring and empowering experience for everyone involved, paving the way for more inclusion and positive change.

PARTNERS' MEETING

After the three-day training, the project partners stayed an extra day in Sevilla for the second face to face meeting of the project. Together, they reviewed the outcomes of the sessions, discussed feedback to improve the materials piloted during the training, and planned the next steps for the project. It was a productive day of collaboration, ensuring the momentum continues as we work toward greater inclusion and empowerment for women with disabilities.
